Structural changes in the U.S. economy caused by ongoing technological innovation, communication and transportation improvements, integration of capital markets and increased international competition have fostered great uncertainty regarding the future of our economy. Nowhere are the impacts of these changes more dramatic than in the residential neighborhoods of our nation's older central cities.

The challenges of the global restructuring have combined with the longstanding problems of suburban competition, manufacturing decline, rising poverty, municipal overburden, and middle-class flight to undermine the stability of our cities' older residential neighborhoods. Citizen leaders and municipal officials from cities such as Bridgeport, Camden, Benton Harbor, East St. Louis, Detroit, and South Central Los Angeles are becoming increasingly concerned about the future viability of their communities. This crisis of confidence has led to new criticism of the urban planning profession for its failure to develop policies, programs and plans to stabilize and revitalize our most distressed neighborhoods.

The failure of university-trained planners to provide workable solutions to the problems confronting our declining inner-city neighborhoods has generated new criticism of our nation's colleges and universities; they are coming under increasing public scrutiny for pursuing research that does not appear to address society's most pressing environmental, economic and social problems and for being inattentive to the educational needs of undergraduate students. University-trained planners are coming under increasing public scrutiny for pursuing research that does not appear to address society's most pressing environmental, economic and social problems and for being inattentive to the educational needs of undergraduate students.

These criticisms of our nation's colleges and universities threaten to undermine the basic social compact that has existed between higher education and civil society in the Post-Sputnik era. Throughout the Post World War II period, the state, supplemented by private and corporate philanthropy, supported the research, education and service missions of the university while allowing faculty and administrators to determine educational policies and programs with little accountability. Colleges and universities, in return, produced basic and applied research and graduates who were capable of maintaining U.S. economic, political and military power in the highly polarized context of the Cold War. The disintegration of the Soviet Union, which
 Bulletin Board

March, 1996

PN’er Updates

- PN’er Micky Lauria has been made co-editor of the Journal of Planning Education and Research, and is making an effort to include more practicing planners in the process of reviewing articles for the publication. If you’re interested in such a task, or would like to recommend someone, contact Micky Lauria, Associate Professor and Director, Division of Urban Research and Policy Studies, College of Urban and Public Affairs, University of New Orleans, New Orleans, LA 70148, 504/286-7106; e-mail: mylav@uno.edu.

- PN’er Peter Divier has published "U.S. Housing Policy at the Crossroads: A Progressive Agenda to Rebuild the Housing Constitution," which "analyses the factors contributing to HUD’s vulnerability, reviews the various proposals to reorganize the agency, and proposes an alternative, and more comprehensive, policy that has the potential to expand the political constituency for federal housing policy." The paper is available for $3 from The International and Public Affairs Center of Occidental College at 213/259-2991.

- PN’er Maurie Cohen writes: "I have recently organized a debate on the topic of voluntary simplicity and whether a scaled-down lifestyle that places less dependence on the consumer culture provides a realistic path toward ecological sustainability. The debate featuring Dune Elgin, author of the widely acclaimed book Voluntary Simplicity: Toward a Way of Life That Is Outwardly Simple, Inwardly Rich (William Morrow, 1993), and Juliet Schar, author of The Overwork Manifesto (Basic Books, 1991). Copies of the transcript and video are available. I am currently engaged in a comparative project on ecological modernization in Europe, Japan, and the United States. Forthcoming work in the academic literature includes an article on environmental equity which examines the spatial distribution of industrial emissions in the Midwest and an article on the economics of environmental risk events. I can be contacted at Oxford Centre for the Environment, Ethics, and Society, Mansfield College, University of Oxford, Oxford, OX1 3TF, United Kingdom. Telephone and fax: 44-(0)1865-278886; e-mail: maurie.cohen@imperial.ac.uk.

- PN’er has come up a number of times recently on various electronic bulletin boards and mailing lists, not the least of which was a posting from PN’er Randy Stocker saying: "While most professional organizations hole up in luxury hotels for their annual conference in East St. Louis, one of the most developed 20th century capitalist disinvestment and structural racism. If you are dissatisfied with the politics of the status quo in the planning field, and if you think planning should be about developing democracy, empowering the powerless, and organizing communities to make change, you will appreciate the Planners Network. It’s not just for PN’ers. Those interested in empowering forms of community organizing and development, and academics looking for a way to practice progressive thinking will also find a home." Thanks, Randy.

- PN’er Robyn Bancroft has moved from the East Coast back to the Midwest and joined the City of Rockford, Illinois, Department of Community Development in the position of planner. Her new work address is City of Rockford, Department of Community Development, 425 E. State St., Rockford, IL 61114; 815/967-5612.

- "How bout some articles on rural side of planning?" suggests PN’er Jean Garrett. "Although urbanists (and some of my best friends are urbanists) may think everyone should live in cities, not all of us do. We face significant problems out here on the 'frontiers,' not just the least of which is urban flight (of a couple of kinds) which has brought with it, among others, issues of affordable housing, environmental pollution/degradadation, and culture conflict." Look for such an article from Jean in an upcoming issue, and get in touch with her if you’re interested in contributing to it, or just discussing rural/urban issues. Jean Garren, P.O. Box 880525, Steamboat Springs, CO 80488; 970/368-4648.

- Thanks in particular to some membership solicitations posted on a few student-oriented electronic mailing lists, PN has had quite a influx of new student members in the past two months. Welcome to new members, welcome back to returning members (and to renewing members (in no particu-

March 1996

Planners Network

Policy Updates and Alerts

- Istoek Rises from the Dead. The Nonprofit Advocacy Bill (known as the Istoek Amendment for Rep. Ernest Istoek (R-OK) who proposed it) was revived on the House floor in early March, and attached to the continuing resolution which would provide $1.5 billion for the federal government through fiscal year 1996. The amendment was a severely watered down version of the original proposal, still requiring that nonprofits receiving federal grants file a report every year that discloses all their lobbying activities and expenses. While it doesn’t have some of the hamster aspects of the earlier bill, such as limits on lobbying and ‘bounty hunter’ provisions, it still imposes a major new record-keeping burden and broadens the definition of lobbying extensively. The bill passed 211-209, but has not been taken up in the Senate yet. PN’ers are asked to contact their senators and ask that they oppose any measure with any version of the Istoek Amendment attached to it. For more information contact Lisa Ranghelii at Center for Community Change: 202/342-0567.

- Campaign to save the Brook amendment. A national call has been actioned for issuing houses for groups lobbying to Congress to reject the proposed repeal of the Brook Amendment, which caps public housing rents at 30% of family income. Groups and individuals are asked to contact their senators and representatives and insist that they “Keep the Cap.” For more information contact Lisa Ranghelii at the Center for Community Change: 202/342-0567.

Jobs

- Executive Director, Los Angeles. SRO Housing, a non-profit corporation which owns and operates residential hotels for very low income individuals in Los Angeles, is seeking an executive director with 9 years of nonprofit housing or social service experience. The ability to diversify funding, build community relations, and coordinate a training program and relate to a broad range of people is essential. Resumes by 4/1996 to Norman Roberts & Associates, Inc. Attn: Maxene Johnson, 500 N. Pershing Drive, Suite 1800, Los Angeles, CA 90067-1507; fax 310/552-1113; e-mail nrar-pcs@jocm.com. EOE/ADA.

- Project Director, Chicago. The ACORN Housing Corporation of Illinois is seeking an experienced housing development professional with a strong desire to be part of a people’s movement for social justice to serve as Project Director for its Chicago program. More information from (and resumes to) ACORN Housing Corporation, 117 W. Harrison, barely giving a second thought to its Chicago, IL 60605; e-mail: achexclud@igc.org.

- Executive Director / Palo Alto, CA. Executive Director of Palo Alto Community Alliance & Neighborhood Development Organization (EPA CAN DO), a grassroots community development organization which provides a vehicle for increased capital investment in EPA and to ensure that development happens in terms acceptable to community residents and busi-ess owners, is looking for an executive director with at least two years experience in non-profit housing development and management. For more information or to apply contact Search Committee/EPACAN DO, 2369 University Ave., East Palo Alto, CA 94303, 415/473-9385.

Funding / fundraising

- Fundraising. Kim Klein’s Grassroots Fundraising Series is a 7-session series of fundraising: Role of Board; Asking for Money; Major Gifts; Direct Mail; Special Events; Donor Loyalty; video tape by the author of Fundraising for Social Change. Available from The Headwaters Fund, 122 W. Franklin Ave., #518, Mpls., MN 55404, 612/879-6062; contact them at price.

- Religious Funding. ResourceWomen has published the 1995/96 Religious Funding Resource Guide, a guide to fund-sources from religious institutions. The 500-page guide is available for $75 from ResourceWomen, 4527 South Dakota Ave., NE, Washington, DC 20017; 202/832-8071.

- Foundations. The National Committee for Responsive Philanthropy has published Foundations in the New Era, a special report examining how foundations have responded to changes in the public policy in the U.S. It’s available for $25, or $12.50 if you’re a NCRP member or organization with an annual budget under $200,000, from NCRP, 2001 S St., NW, #620, Washington, DC 20009; 202/387-9177.

Calls for Papers

- Information Technology. The Information Society journal has invited authors to submit papers for review on the topic of “Virtual Societies: Their Prospects and Dilemmas” for a special issue. Full guidelines for submissions can be found on the World Wide Web at http://www.ics.edu/cslig/dis/gis. Submissions are due by July 31 to Magrid Iqbal, Guest Editor, TIS, Programs in Information Science, The Claremont Graduate School, 130 E. 9th St., Claremont, CA 91711; e-mail: igibraim@cgp.edu

- Progressive Planning. Planners Network is always looking for ideas (and authors) for articles on topics of activism, progressive planning, and policy issues, for publication in this newsletter. Contact Winston Pitcock, Planners Network/Pratt GCPE, 200 Willoughby Ave., Brooklyn, NY 11205; 718/365-3461, winnopp@nets.com.
PNN'ER UPDATES

PN'ER Merry Lauria has been made co-editor of the Journal of Planning Education and Research, and is making an effort to include more practicing planners in the process of reviewing articles for the publication. If you’re interested in such a task, or would like to recommend someone, contact Merry Lauria, Associate Professor and Director, Division of Urban Research and Policy Studies, College of Urban and Public Affairs, University of New Orleans, New Orleans, LA 70148, 504/286-7106; e-mail: mylar@uno.edu.

PN'ER Peter Dore} has published "U.S. Housing Policy at the Crossroads: A Progressive Agenda to Rebuild the Housing Constiuency," which "analyzes the factors contributing to HUD’s vulnerability, reviews the various proposals to reorganize the agency, and proposes an alternative, and more comprehensive, policy that has the potential to expand the political constituency for federal housing policy." The paper is available for $3 from The International and Public Affairs Center of Occidental College at 213/259-2991.

PN'ER Maurie Cohen writes: "I have recently organized a debate on the topic of voluntary simplicity and whether a scaled-down lifestyle that places less dependence on the consumer culture provides a realistic path toward ecological sustainability. The debate featuring Dune Elgie, author of the widely acclaimed book Voluntary Simplicity: Toward a Way of Life That is Outwardly Simple, Inwardly Rich (William Morrow, 1993), and Julian Schar, author of The Overworked American (Basic Books, 1991). Copies of the transcript and video are available. I am currently engaged in a comparative project on ecological modernization in Europe, Japan, and the United States. Forthcoming work in the academic literature includes an article on environmental equity which examines the spatial distribution of industrial emissions in the Midwest and an article on the economics of environmental risk events. I can be contacted at Oxford Centre for the Environment, Ethics, and Society, Manfield College, University of Oxford, Oxford, OX1 3TF, United Kingdom. Telephone and fax: 44/(0)1865-270886; e-mail: maurie.cohen@jdmail.oxford.ac.uk." PN'ER has come up with a number of times recently on various electronic bulletin boards and mailing lists, not the least of which was a posting from PN'ER Randy Stoeker saying "While most professional organizations hold up in luxury hotels for their annual conference in East St. Louis, one of the most devoted members of the 20th century capitalist disin- vestment and structural racism... if you are dissatisfied with the policies of the status quo in the planning field, and if you think planning should be about developing democracy, empowering the powerless, and organizing communities to make change, you will appreciate the Planners Network. It’s not just for Planners. Their commitment to empowering forms of community organizing and development, and academics looking for a way to practice progressive thinking will also find a home." Thanks, Randy.

PN'ER Robyn Bancroft has moved from the East Coast back to the Midwest and joined the City of Rockford, Illinois, Department of Community Development in the position of planner. Her new work address is City of Rockford, Department of Community Development, 425 E. State St., Rockford, IL 61104; 815/987-5612.

"How bout some articles on the real side of planning?" suggests PN'ER Jean Gardner. "Although urbanists (and some of my best friends are urbanists) may think everyone should live in cities, not all of us do. We face significant problems out here on the ‘frontiers’, not the least of which is urban flight (of a couple of kinds) which has brought with it, among others, issues of affordable housing, environmental pollution/degradation, and culture conflict." Look for such an article from Jean in an upcoming issue, and get in touch with her if you’re interested in contributing to it, or just discussing rural/urban issues. Jean Garren, P.O. Box 880525, Steamboat Springs, CO 80488; 970/836-4488.

"Thanks in particular to some membership solicitations posted on a few student-oriented electronic mailing lists, PN has had quite a influx of new student members in the past two months. Welcome to new members, welcome back to returning members, and thanks to renewing members (in no particular order). Robyn G. Bancroft, Reynolds N. Blake, Ricanne Hadrian, Dinah Wayne, Roger Feinstein, Raphael Fischer, Aiya Trottier, Jim Ellis, Lorri Baudro, Yvonne Margedant, Lisa Tom, William Potage, M. Helen Cohen, Helen Czoynka, Maurizio Antoniozis, Scena Agnani, Rachel Hyman, C. Cahill, Diane Gomney, Roger Bergonich, Aija Bubel, Brenda Reilly, Saskia Sassen, Peggy Newfield, Mary Snyder, David Finet, Don Boskey, Dr. Fukuo Akimoto, Matthew Mitchell, Karen Westmont, Jim Farmam, Caroline Havey, Marita Lisa Lopez, Nathan Weber, Charles Hoch, Holly Rosenleaf, Mary Catherine Snyder, Ray Bramley, Sylvia Star-Lack, Michael G. Dean, Pamela Hughes, Scott Campbell, Kenneth Tauer, Merrill Lawrence, Thom McCue, Angela C.S. Stuber, Lorri Baudro, Jim Converse, Francis Moore Lappe, Ron Nash, Jennifer Lindboom, Peter Lankovich, Rodney Brown, Anne Miller, Todd Swanson, Sharon Baranofsky, Rasmina W. Kirmani, Janet Garren."
ECONOMIC AND COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

- CRA/FAIR Lending. "Community Reinvestment & Fair Lending Training Manual" (in 4 parts: Legal Overview, Checklist & Worksheets, Model Forms, Resource Guide) is available ($10 hand copy, $2 diskette) from the Community Reinvestment Clearinghouse, NY Law School, 57 Worth St., NYC, NY 10013; 212/411-2899. The Clearinghouse also offers technical assistance, a resource library, regulatory alerts on new CD legislation, and conferences.

- National Urban Policy. "Empowerment: A New Covenant With America's Communities," President Clinton's 1st Nat. Urban Policy Report, is available ($4) from HUD USER, PO Box 6091, Rockville, MD 20849; 800/245-2691; e-mail: hudsuser@aspenys.com. You might be able to get a free copy of the 57-page report from American Communities, 800/998-9999.

- Microenterprise Development. "Enabling Entrepreneurship: Microenterprise Development in the US" presents findings from the first year of a 5-year study of 7 leading microenterprise programs. $18 from the Aspen Inst., PO Box 222, Queenston, MD 21658; 410/820-5326.

- Economic Outlook. "The 1996 Portrait: Regional Economic Review & Outlook" (64 pp.) is available from the Northwest Policy Ctr., University of Washington Graduate School of Public Affairs, Box 335600, Seattle, WA 98195-3060; 206/543-7900.

- Business Incubators. "A Comprehensive Guide to Business Incubation, a 400-page collection of advice, lessons, and wisdom from top incubation professionals, has been published by the National Business Incubation Association. Price is $65 for members, $80 for non-members, plus shipping and handling (discounts for school and bulk orders). For more information contact the Association at 20 E. Circle Dr., Ste. 190, Athens, Ohio, 45701; 614/593-4351.

- Government Cuts. The March issue of The NNC Information Report, the National Neighborhood Coalition’s newsletter, features a synopsis of a speech given by Robert Greenstein on the louses neighborhoods face due to Congressional cuts. It’s available from NNC, 1873 Connecticut Ave., NW, #710, Washington, DC 20009; 202/986-2099.

- Activist’s Handbook. The Activist’s Handbook: A Primer for the 1990s & Beyond, by Randy Shaw, who directs San Francisco’s Tenderloin Housing Clinic, will be available ($20.95 pp) in June from Univ. Calif. Press, 1445 Lower Ferry Rd., Ewing, NJ 08638; 609/883-1758.

- Community Strategy. The Labor/Community Strategy Center has a new publications catalog on its books, articles & films for organizations, activists, faculty & students, covering a range of unionism, immigration, corporate air, quality transportation, etc.). Available from 3780 Wilshire Blvd., #1200, LA, CA 90010; 213/387-2800.

- Organizer Resources. The Organizer Mailing, a quarterly collection of reprinted articles and documents of interest to organizers, leaders, and supporters of organizing, is available for $40 for individuals, $50 for organizations, from Organizer Training Center, 442 A Vickburg, San Francisco, CA 94114; 415/821-6180.

March 1996

ENVIRONMENT

- Environmental Solutions. Renew America, "America’s leading source for environmental solutions," offers a range of policies and programs choosing successful environmental programs around the country. The 163-page Environmental Success Index is $25, $15 for members and nonprofits, from Renew America, 1404 16th St., NW, Ste. 710, Washington, DC 20036; 202/232-2252.

HOUSING

- Lead. "Guidelines for the Evaluation & Control of Lead-Based Paint Hazards in Housing" is available ($4) from HUD USER, PO Box 6091, Rockville, MD 20849; 800/245-2691, E-mail: hudsuser@aspenys.com.

- Universal Housing. "For All: Keeping the Promise" is a 17-page, Nov. 1995 document prepared by a 23-person Working Group convened by the Natl. Housing Law Project and the legal Services for Housing Task Force. Copies are $1 each from the Law Project, 2201 Broadway, #815, Oakland, CA 94612, 510/251-9400, E-mail: Halsens@H N 1050. There’s a 10-copy min. order at that price; contact them for price of smaller orders.

- Non-Profit Housing, "Status & Prospects of the Non-Profit Housing Sector" is available ($4) from HUD USER, PO Box 6091, Rockville, MD 20849; 800/245-2691, E-mail: hudsuser@aspenys.com.

- Shared Housing. Under One Roof: Issues and Innovations in Shared Housing, a book of essays on topics which suggest that current housing policy and regulations, supported by popular opinion, limits the development of multiple-dwelling houses, houses which would provide a much needed option for low- and moderate-income families, will be available in in August from State University of New York Press. For more information, contact SUNY Press at 518/472-5000.

POVERTY/WELFARE

- Welfare Curriculum. "Welfare: Opposing Viewpoints" is the title of a h.s./college text in preparation by Greenhaven Press. If you have articles, documents, position papers, book excerpts, bibliographies to submit for inclusion, contact Annie Girton at Greenhaven, PO Box 24003, Dayton, CA 91409; 800/220-0909, 619/485-7424. If you would like your organization listed in the appendix, contact them as well.

New York Planners Network Forums

The New York Chapter of Planners Network continues its annual series of forums. March 29 • Advocacy in Health Care May 3 • Community Based Organizations: Organizers or Property Managers?

Forums begin at 6:00 p.m. and will be held at the Puck Building in Manhattan, 295 Lafayette St. For more information call Winton at 718-636-3461.
ECONOMIC AND COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

- CIRA. "Community Reinvestment Act: Challenges Remain to Successfully Implement CRA" is a 111-page, Nov. 1995 report (GAO/HRD-96-23), available from the US GAO, PO Box 1613, Gaithersburg, MD 20884; 202/512-3000.

- CRA/Fair Lending. "Community Reinvestment & Fair Lending Training Manual" (4 parts: Legal Overview, Checklists & Worksheets, Model Forms, Resource Guide) is available ($10 hand copy, $25 diskette) from the Community Reinvestment Clearinghouse, NY Law School, 57 West St., NYC, NY 10013; 212/411-2899. The Clearinghouse also offers technical assistance, a resource library, regulatory alerts on new CD legislation, and conferences.

- National Urban Policy. "Empowerment: A New Covenant With America’s Communities," President Clinton’s 1st Natl. Urban Policy Report, is available ($4) from HUD USER, PO Box 6091, Rockville, MD 20849; 800/242-2691; e-mail: huduser@partners.com. You might be able to get a free copy of the 57-page report from American Communities, 800/998-9999.

- Microenterprise Development. "Enabling Entrepreneurship: Microenterprise Development in the US,” presents findings from the first year of a 5-year study of 7 leading microenterprise programs. $18 from the Aspen Inst., PO Box 222, Queenston, MD 21658; 410/280-5326.

- Economic Outlook. "The 1996 Portrait: Regional Economic Review & Outlook" (64 pp.) is available from the Northwest PolicyCtr., University of Washington Graduate School of Public Affairs, Box 353600, Seattle, WA 98195-3060; 206/543-7900.

- Business Incubators. A Comprehensive Guide to Business Incubation, a 400-page collection of advice, lessons, and wisdom from top incubation professionals, has been published by the National Business Incubation Association, Price $65 for members, $80 for non-members, plus shipping and handling (discounts for school and bulk orders). For more information contact the Association at 2 E. Circle Dr., Ste. 190, Athens, Ohio, 45701; 614/593-4331.

- Government Cuts. The March issue of The NNC Information Report, the National Neighborhood Coalition’s newsletter, features a synopsis of a speech given by Robert Greenstein on the losses neighborhoods face due to Congressional cuts. It’s available from NNC, 1873 Connecticut Ave., NW, #710, Washington, DC 20009; 202/986-2069.

- Activist’s Handbook. The Activist’s Handbook: A Primer for the 1990s & Beyond, by Randy Shaw, an author who directs San Francisco’s Tenderloin Housing Clinic, will be available ($20.95 pb.) in June from Univ. Calif. Press, 1445 Lower Ferry Rd., Ewing, NJ 08638, 609/883-1758.

- Community Strategy, The Labor/Community Strategy Center has a new publications catalog on its books, articles & films for organizations, activists, faculty & students, covering a range of issues (immigration, corporate control, air quality, transportation, etc.). Available from 3780 Wilshire Blvd., #1202, LA, CA 90010, 213/337-2800.

- Organizer Resources. The Organizer Mailing, a quarterly collection of reprinted articles and documents of interest to organizers, leaders, and supporters of organizing, is available for $40 for individuals, $50 for organizations, from Organizer Training Center, 442-A Vickburg, San Francisco, CA 94114; 415/821-6180.

ENVIRONMENT

- Environmental Justice. "An Update on Developments in the Environmental Justice Movement: An Open Letter to Funding Organizations," from Ann Bastian (New World Fds.) & Dana Alton (Public Welfare Fds.), is available from Edna Fratiere, New World Fdn., 100 E. 85 ST, NYC, NY 10028; 212/249-1023. Also available is their 1993 memo, reviewing formation of the EM movement (209/651-1800) and Bastian (212/249-1023) welcome responses to the memo.

- Environmental Solutions. Renew America, “America’s leading source for environmental solutions,” offers a range of publications and programs advancing successful environmental programs around the country. The 163-page Environmental Success Index is $25, $15 for members and nonprofits, from Renew America, 1400 16th St. NW, Ste. 710, Washington, DC 20036; 202/222-2252.

- Lead. "Guidelines for the Evaluation & Control of Lead-Based Paint Hazards in Housing" is available ($4) from HUD USER, PO Box 6091, Rockville, MD 20849; 800/245-2691, E-mail: huduser@partners.com.

- Housing. "Universal Housing. "For All Families: Keeping the Promise" is a 17-page, Nov. 1995 document prepared by a 22-person Working Group convened by the Natl. Housing Law Project and the legal services community’s Task Force. Copies are $1 each from the Law Project, 2201 Broadway, #815, Oakland, CA 94612, 510/251-9400, E-mail: Handset HEN1080. There’s a 10-copy min. order at that price; contact them for price of smaller orders.

- Non-Profit Housing. "Status & Prospects of the Non-Profit Housing Sector" is available ($4) from HUD USER, PO Box 6091, Rockville, MD 20849; 800/245-2691, E-mail: huduser@partners.com.

- Shared Housing. Under One Roof: Issues and Innovations in Shared Housing, a book of essays on topics which suggest that current housing policy and regulations, supported by popular opinion, limits the development of multiple-occupancy houses, houses which would provide a much needed option for low- and moderate-income families, will be available in July from State University of New York Press. For more information, contact SUNY Press at 518/472-5000.

POVERTY / WELFARE

- Welfare Curriculum. "Welfare: Opposing Viewpoints" is the title of h.s./college text in preparation by Greenhaven Press. If you have articles, documents, position papers, book excerpts, bibliographies to submit for inclusion, contact Anne Girton at Greenhaven Press, 25000 Woodbridge Center Dr., Fairfax, VA 22030, 703/429-6194/85-7424. If you would like your organization listed in the appendix, contact them as well.

New York Planners Network Forums

The New York Chapter of Planners Network continues its annual series of forums.

March 29 • Advocacy in Health Care

May 3 • Community Based Organizations: Organizers or Property Managers?

Forums begin at 6:00 p.m. and will be held at the Puck Building in Manhattan, 295 Lafayette St.
For more information call Winton at 718-636-3461.
RACE / RACISM

  The Commission's background research papers, as well as its earlier fact-finding report and the recommendations report, are available via Internet: http://www.itl.cornell.edu.

Women, Children and Family

- Families and Schools. Raising Our Future: Families, Schools & Communities: Joining Together, by Heather Weiss (560 pp., 1995), is available ($28.90) from the Harvard Family Research Proj., 38 Concord Ave., Cambridge, MA 02138.

- Communities and Schools. The Basic School: A Community for Learning, by Ernest Boyer of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching (225 pp., 1995), is available ($10) from Calif. Princeton Fulfillment, PO Box 7780-4271, Phila., PA 19182-4271, 800/777-4726. Other related materials are also available.

miscellaneous

- Urban Social Health. "Urban Social Health: A Chart Book Profiling the Nation's 100 Largest Cities" (163 pp., Dec. 1995) is available ($50) from the Natl. Public Health Hospital Inst., 1212 NY Ave. NW, 4800, Wash., DC 20005.

- Advocacy Strategies. "The Advocacy Institute, a 12-year old organization dedicated ... to share the skills, goals, and inspiration that we have gained from working together with those who are advocates for social and economic justice," has many publications available, on topics ranging from media advocacy to the environment to lobbying. A publication list is available from the Institute at 170 L St. NW, 4th Fl., Wash., DC 20003; 202/659-8475.

- Philanthropy. "The Winter. 1996 issue of Responsive Philanthropy features articles on the Republicans’ belief that charities will pick up the slack if budget cuts, transfor-..." (See page 7 for full text).

- Philanthropy. "The Community for Living Democracy publishes a quarterly newsletter called Doing Democracy ("Democracy is not what we have. It's what we do."). The Winter, 1995 issue focuses on the launch of their new American News Service, a new syndicated service providing stories of solution-oriented action directed at readers' most pressing concerns. The newsletter can be obtained from The Center, RR #1 Black Fox Rd., Brattleboro, VT 05301; 802/254-1234.

- Urban Indicators. A quarterly newsletter, Urban Quality Indicators, seeks to describe the various urban "benchmarking" efforts (i.e., measures of community quality) in North America. Jacksonville, FL & "Sustainable Seattle" are featured in the latest issues - plus critiques on their choices of indicators. Also in each issue - a City Culture Map - locat..." (See page 7 for full text).

conferences and workshops

- Regionalism. "Linking Regional & Local Strategies to Create Healthy Communities," a conf. sponsored by the Univ. of Minn. Inst. on Race & Poverty will be held April 12-13 in St. Paul. Atlanta Mayor Ivan Allen Jr. will attend the May 22-23 meeting in Baltimore. The conf. brings together regional strategists, community development corps. & neighborhood activists to develop strategies for overcoming the problems facing poor communities of color." (See page 7 for full text).

- Earth Day. Earth Day Lobby Day, a full day of speeches, rallies, and action, will be held April 22, at the New York State Capital in Albany. For more information contact Earth Day Lobby Day, 9 Murray St., New York, NY 10007; 212/464-6490.

- Regional Planning. "From Risk to Recovery: Implementing the Third Plan for the New-New Jersey-Connecticut Metropolitan Area," the Regional Plan Association's 66th Annual Assembly, will be held April 23 at the Marriott Marquis Hotel, in New York, NY. Features of the event include workshops on the RPA's plan, and an address by HUD Secretary Henry Cisneros. Registration is $90 before April 5, $100 after. For more information contact RPA, 570 Lexington Ave., 20th FL, New York, NY 10022; 212/980-8530, x208.

Association for Enterprise Opportunity. The Association for Enterprise Opportunity (AEO) will hold its sixth annual conference and membership meeting, "Impact Through Collaboration," May 1-4 in Providence, Rhode Island. Workshop topics include: marketing and policy issues. Registration is $450 for non-members, $350 for members. For more information contact Kelly Stepo at AEO, 70 E. Lake St., Ste. 520, Chicago, IL 60601; 312/263-2383.

Sustainable Resources. "The Sixth International Symposium on Society and Resource Management: Social Behavior, Natural Resources, and the Environment" will be held May 18-23, 1996, at The Pennsylvania State University, University Park, PA. Anyone interested in participating, or presenting a paper or getting more information, contact R.L. Curry, Program Co-Chair, School of Forest Resources, Pennsylvania State University, 22F Ferguson Building, University Park, PA 16802-2601; 814/863-0401. fjl@psuvm.psu.edu

Association for Community Design. The Association for Community Design (ACD) will hold its annual conference in Brooklyn, NY, June 13-16. A portion of the conference will be held in conjunction with the Planners Network conference, with a focus on community based planning by community design centers. For more information contact R.L. Curry, c/o PICCED, 370 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn NY 11205; 718/636-3486; e-mail: hjm036@handynet.com.

March 1996

International, Inc. It is available from Ric Stephens, Director of Planning, Keith 22600 Cactus Ave., Ste. 300, Moreno Valley, CA 92559; 909/653-0234; e-mail: rixstephens@aol.com.

- Resource Directory. Tranet, a bi-monthly newsletter for the alternative and transformative movement, continues to publish an extensive guide every two months to resources available "of, by, and for people who are creating the new social paradigm - people who are changing the world by changing the way they live - personal, local, and global technology and lifestyles." It's available from Tranet, Box 567, Rangelcy, ME 04970-0567; 207/864-2252; e-mail: tranet@tice.acp.org.

- Media Advocacy. The Center for Living Democracy publishes a quarterly newsletter called Doing Democracy ("Democracy is not what we have. It's what we do."). The Winter, 1995 issue focuses on the launch of their new American News Service, a new syndicated service providing stories of solution-oriented action directed at readers' most pressing concerns. The newsletter can be obtained from The Center, RR #1 Black Fox Rd., Brattleboro, VT 05301; 802/254-1234.

- Urban Indicators. A new quarterly newsletter, Urban Quality Indicators, seeks to describe the various urban "benchmarking" efforts (i.e., measures of community quality) in North America. Jacksonville, FL, & "Sustainable Seattle" are featured in the 1st 2 issues; plus critiques on their choices of indicators. Also in each issue - a City Culture Map - locat- ing "people's lives - pivotal cultural tech- nologies and lifestyles." It's available from Tranet, Box 567, Rangelcy, ME 04970-0567; 207/864-2252; e-mail: tranet@tice.acp.org.

Conferences and Workshops

- Regionalism. "Linking Regional & Local Strategies to Create Healthy Communities," a conf sponsored by the Univ. of Minn. Inst. on Race & Poverty will be held April 12-13 in St. Paul, Mn. Key speaker is former Albuquerque Mayor Dave Rusk, author of Cities Without Suburbs. The conf. "brings together regional strategists, community development corps. & neighborhood activists to develop strategies for overcoming the problems facing poor communities of color." Inf. from the inst., 415 Law Cir., 229 19th Ave. S., Mpls. MN 55455, 612/625-1580.

- Earth Day. Earth Day Lobby Day, a full day of speeches, rallies, actions, and a press conference at the Capitol, April 22, at the New York State Capitol in Albany. For more information contact Earth Day Lobby Day, 9 Murray St., New York, NY 10007; 212/345-6460.

- Regional Planning. "From Risk to Recovery: Implementing the Third Plan for the New York-New Jersey-Connecticut Metropolitan Area," the Regional Plan Association's 67th Annual Assembly, will be held April 23 at the Marriott Marquis Hotel, in New York, NY. Figures of the event include workshops on the RPA's plan, and an address by HUD Secretary Henry Cisneros. Registration is $90 before April 5, $100 after. For more information contact RPA, 570 Lexington Ave., 20th Fl., New York, NY 10022; 212/980-8530, x208.

- Local Government. The Local Government Commission will host "Putting Our Communities Back on Their Feet," April 26-27, in San Francisco. CA. FP 199/404/1198-05/19/96.
Progressive Planning in our Communities
June 14-16, 1995 • Pratt Institute • Brooklyn, NY

CONFERENCE HIGHLIGHTS

• Visits and workshops (June 14) hosted by community-based organizations in Brooklyn neighborhoods: Red Hook, Williamsburg, Greenpoint, Bushwick, Bedford-Stuyvesant, and Fort Greene. Site visits include mutual housing projects, low-income rehabs, a New Vision school, military conversion, industrial incubator, and comprehensive neighborhood planning projects.
• Workshops organized by activists from local and national advocacy groups, including Transportation Alternatives, Natural Resources Defense Council, and the Association for Community Design.
• Analysis of the UN Habitat II conference by Planners Network delegates and other participants
• Workshop topics include:
  - Environmental Justice
  - Sustainable Development
  - Labor and Communities
  - Immigration and Cities
  - Role of Transnationally
  - Faith-based Development
  - Privatization and Deregulation
  - Healthy Cities
  - Women and Labor
  - Habitat II
  - National Urban Policy
  - Regionalism Today
  - Reinventing HUD
  - Employment and Joblessness
  - Gay and Lesbian Issues
• Exhibit of community-initiated plans
• Videos of urban protest and survival
• Working papers and action proposals on progressive planning strategies
• Case studies of community-based planning efforts
• Pre-conference walking tours of Harlem, the South Bronx and the Lower East Side
• Bus tour of Brooklyn’s waterfront and diverse neighborhoods
• Bicycle tour of Brooklyn led by activists from Transportation Alternatives
• Subway tour led by activists from the Straphangers Campaign
• Keynote Speeches by Luis Garden Acosta (El Puente Academy), Ruth Messinger (Manhattan Borough President), and Bernie Sanders (U.S. Congress)/(invited)
• Cultural Event featuring music for dancing by La Borinquena

Call for Participants

If you would like to participate as a facilitator or presenter in a workshop, let us know. We are putting workshops together now.

PN96 Co-Sponsors
Pratt Institute Graduate Center for Planning & Environment • The Tides Foundation, Pequod Fund
Brooklyn Union Gas Co. • Pratt Institute Center for Community & Environmental Development

PN96 will be held concurrently with the national conference of the Association for Community Design. For more information on the ACD conference, contact: Rex Curry, Pratt Institute Center for Community & Environmental Development, 379 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn, NY 11205; 718/636-3486.

Registration Fee
(includes all conference events and some meals)

General: $80 per person before April 15, $95 per person after April 15 $
Student/Unemployed: $40 per person before April 15, $50 per person after April 15 $
One day registration: $25 per person per day $
Tours: $10 per person for Thursday or Sunday tours (circle below) (___ tours x $10) $

Thursday 6/13 Walking Tours
Harlem (9a.m. - 1p.m.) • Lower East Side (9a.m. - 1p.m.) • South Bronx (10a.m. - 3p.m.)
Sunday 6/16 Tours (all 2 - 5p.m.)
Bicycle Tour • Brooklyn Bus Tour • Subway Tour

Total: $

Full payment must accompany registration. Please make checks payable to Planners Network. Send to: Planners Network/Pratt GCPE • 200 Willoughby Ave. • Brooklyn, NY 11205

Room reservations

There are a limited number of single and double dormitory rooms available on campus at Pratt.

Single rooms:
Total persons: ___ Arrival date: ___ Departure date: ___ Number of nights: ___@ $35 per person, per night, amount enclosed: $

Double rooms:
Total persons: ___ Arrival date: ___ Departure date: ___ Number of nights: ___ @ $25 per person, per night, amount enclosed: $

Linens: (sheets, towels, blankets) @ $10 per set, duration of conference, amount enclosed: $

If there is someone else registering for the conference who you would like to room with, please let us know who:

If not indicating a specific roommate, please let us know your preferred roommate characteristics: Gender (M/F) Smoker (Y/N)
PLANNERS NETWORK '96

Progressive Planning in our Communities
June 14-16, 1995 • Pratt Institute • Brooklyn, NY

CONFERENCE HIGHLIGHTS

• Visits and workshops (June 14) hosted by community-based organizations in Brooklyn neighborhoods: Red Hook, Williamsburg, Greenpoint, Bushwick, Bedford-Stuyvesant, and Fort Greene. Site visits include mutual housing projects, low-income rehabs, a New Vision school, military conversion, industrial incubator, and comprehensive neighborhood planning projects.
• Workshops organized by activists from local and national advocacy groups, including Transportation Alternatives, Natural Resources Defense Council, and the Association for Community Design.
• Analysis of the UN Habitat II conference by Planners Network delegates and other participants.
• Workshop topics include:
  - Environmental Justice
  - Sustainable Development
  - Labor and Communities
  - Immigration and Cities
  - Role of Transnationals
  - Faith-based Development
  - Privatization and Deregulation
  - Healthy Cities
  - Women and Labor
  - Habitat II
  - National Urban Policy
  - Regionalism Today
  - Reinventing HUD
  - Employment and Joblessness
  - Gay and Lesbian Issues

• Exhibit of community-initiated plans
• Videos of urban protest and survival
• Working papers and action proposals on progressive planning strategies
• Case studies of community-based planning efforts
• Pre-conference walking tours of Harlem, the South Bronx and the Lower East Side
• Bus tour of Brooklyn's waterfront and diverse neighborhoods
• Bicycle tour of Brooklyn led by activists from Transportation Alternatives
• Subway tour led by activists from the Straphangers Campaign
• Keynote Speeches by Luis Garden Acosta (El Puente Academy), Ruth Messinger (Manhattan Borough President), and Bernie Sanders (U.S. Congress)/(invited)
• Cultural Event featuring music for dancing by La Borinqueña

Call for Participants

If you would like to participate as a facilitator or presenter in a workshop, let us know. We are putting workshops together now.

PN96 Co-Sponsors
Pratt Institute Graduate Center for Planning & Environment • The Tides Foundation, Pequod Fund
Brooklyn Union Gas Co. • Pratt Institute Center for Community & Environmental Development

PN96 will be held concurrently with the national conference of the Association for Community Design. For more information on the ACD conference, contact: Rex Curry, Pratt Institute Center for Community & Environmental Development, 379 DeKalb Ave., Brooklyn, NY 11205; 718/636-3486.
marks the end of the Cold War, has denied higher education its former raison d'être. Higher education must re-focus its research and instructional resources on a new social objective if it is to re-establish its basic social compact with civil society. Many universities are seeking to do just that, in part by encouraging faculty to develop service-learning projects that offer students opportunities to acquire critical knowledge and skills while completing research and service projects for community-based organizations serving low-income neighbors. This recent movement for university-based service-learning gained important momentum in the mid-1980s when the presidents of one hundred of the nation's most prestigious private and public colleges and universities formed a group, called the Campus Compact, to promote such activities. Students involved in these initiatives offered their organizational resources to this campaign for socially responsible education by forming a similar advocacy group called the Campus Outreach Opportunity League (COOL).

These two organizations were instrumental in working with the Clinton Administration to secure funding for several new Federally funded programs supporting service-learning activities involving universities and marginalized communities.

Among these were the National Community Service Corporation's AmeriCorps Program, the Department of Housing and Urban Development's Community Outreach Partnership Center, Joint Community Development and Urban Renewal Partnership Programs, and the Department of Education's Urban Service Programs. Since 1992, thousands of university students have earned academic credit in recognition of learning they achieved as community research and service providers through Federally funded community-based service-learning programs.

While many students, faculty and administrators have joined with representatives of the Clinton Administration and members of the press to applaud these efforts, many experienced community activists remain skeptical of this latest wave of university/community partnerships. Many colleges and universities were deeply involved in efforts to support the voter registration campaigns of SNCC, CORE, SCLC and the Freedom Democratic Party throughout the 1960s. Only students engaged in a wide range of direct service activities in low-income urban communities through various programs funded by the Equal Opportunity Act in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

College students were encouraged to participate in student-volunteer activities in the 1970s through the Federally-funded Office of Student Volunteer Programs and the University Year for Action. Campus support for off-campus service projects in urban communities appeared to wane in the 1980s as economic uncertainty led administrators to eliminate many non-teaching programs. The current groundswell of campus interest in the plight of the nation's poorest communities is viewed as yet another in a series of university-initiated community service efforts. Neighborhood leaders representing financially-strapped, community-based organizations are hesitant to invest too much human capital in building relationships with nearby campuses when they appear to be such fickle partners.

Neighborhood leaders are also concerned about the nature of the "partnerships" that colleges and universities wish to establish with community-based organizations. In the past, university faculty and administrators have secured funding for community research and service activities in low-income neighborhoods close to their campuses. These grants frequently provided campus personnel with salaries, benefits and expenses while producing few, if any, tangible benefits for the residents of these communities. Quoting one East St. Louis community leader, "Show me one thing in this town that was produced through the activities of a university where long-time community activists to view university faculty as interest carpet-baggers who use the problems confronting distressed communities to justify research contracts that offer little research and service activities to those neighborhoods from their campuses and the community to provide leadership to such efforts.

4. Acknowledging the real costs incurred by community collaborators involved in partnership activities, campus administrators should make an effort to assist those organizations in covering these costs.

5. Recognizing the importance given to faculty participation in university programs, campus administrators should seek to appoint a senior faculty member to direct these projects.

6. Seeking to encourage broad-based faculty participation in these projects, campus administrators should work to change promotion and tenure guidelines that recognize and reward excellence in public service education and action.

7. Understanding the inherent power and resource imbalance that exists between larger research universities and their community partners, campus administrators should make organizational capacity-building the primary goal of these relationships.

8. Acknowledging the central importance of organizational capacity-building in most university/community partnerships, campus administrators should adopt a participatory action research approach to all community planning and development activities in the mid-1980s.

9. Understanding the pessimism that many low-income families feel regarding the possibilities for positive change, campus administrators should emphasize the importance of program implementation and execution. Participating students and faculty must focus on devising workable solutions to important community problems and raising the funds needed to carry out such projects.

10. Recognizing the importance of organizational capacity-building to any university/community partnership, campus administrators should develop programs that offer classes, training programs and mentoring opportunities to community leaders as well as students.

Kenneth M. Reardon, Co-Chair of Planners Network, is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Urban and Regional Planning at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign where he serves as the Co-Director of the East St. Louis Action Research Project. Thomas F. Shields is the Acting Executive Director of the Waveland/Industry Park Neighborhood Organization in East St. Louis. In addition, a few words from the campus should be underscored. While few university/community partnership programs would embody all of the above-mentioned principles of good practice, many such programs have been supporting the empowerment efforts of local community-based organizations in the area for many years. Among these programs are the following:

- Center for Neighborhood Development, Cleveland State University, 1000 West 3rd Street, Room 105, Cleveland, Ohio 44113-1294, (216) 672-2695, Bill Thayer, Director; Senior Economy Analyst, Karen Zlotnik, (216) 672-2697, Steve Lichty, (216) 672-2610, Program Coordinator.
- Morgan State University, 213 Soldiers Armory, Baltimore, Maryland 21259, 501-444-3044. Elrey E. Tillman, Senior Research Associate.
- Pratt Institute Center for Community and Environmental Development, 20 Willsburg Avenue, Brooklyn, New York 11203, (212) 726-2346. Ron Schiffman, Director.
- New York State University at Stony Brook, 500 Campus Drive, Stony Brook, New York 11794-2500, (516) 432-5377. Tim Staton, Director.
- East St. Louis Action Research Project, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, 312 Temple Bell Hall, Champaign, Illinois 61820, 217-244-3586. Ken Reardon, Co-Director.
- College of Community and Public Service, University of Massachusetts at Boston, 100 Morrissey Boulevard, Boston, Massachusetts 02123-3933, 617-287-7241. Terry Kersten, Professor.
- Department of Urban and Regional Planning, University of Michigan, 2000 Weill Hall Building, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48109, 313-763-3961.
marks the end of the Cold War, has denied higher education its former raison d'être. Higher education must re-focus its research and instructional resources on a new social objective if it is to re-establish its basic social compact with civil society. Many universities are seeking to do so by encouraging faculty to develop service-learn ing projects that offer students opportunities to acquire critical knowledge and skills while completing research and service pro jects for community-based organizations serving low-income neighborhoods. This recent movement for university-based ser vice-learning gained important momentum in the mid-1980s when the presidents of one hundred of the nation's most presti gious public and private colleges and universities formed a group, called the Campus Compact, to promote such activities. Students involved in these initiatives added their organizational resources to this campaign for socially- responsible education by forming a similar advocacy group called the Campus Outreach Opportunity League (COOL).

These two organizations were instrumental in working with the Clinton Administration to secure funding for several new Federal programs supporting service-learning activities involving universities and marginalized communities. Among these were the National Community Service Corporation's AmeriCorps Program, the Department of Housing and Urban Development's Community Outreach Partnership Center, the Department of Housing and Urban Renewal's Community Development Block Grants, and the Department of Education's Urban Service Programs. Since 1992, thousands of university students have earned academic credit in recognition of their community service and have served as community leaders and service-providers through Federal grants-funded service-learning programs. While many students, faculty and administrators have joined with representatives of the Clinton Administration and members of the press to applaud these efforts, many experienced community activists remain skeptical of this latest wave of university/community partnerships. Many colleges and universities were deeply involved in efforts to support the voter registration campaigns of SNCC, CORE, SCLC and the Freedom Democratic Party throughout the South. Many university students engaged in a wide range of direct service activities in low income urban communities through various programs funded by the Equal Opportunity Act in the late 1960s and early 1970s. College students were encouraged to participate in student volun teer activities in the 1970s through the Federally-funded Office of Student Volunteer Programs and the University Year for Action. Campus support for off-campus service projects by urban-based community organizations appeared to wane in the 1980s as economic uncertainty led administrators to eliminate many non-teaching programs. The current groundswell of campus interest in the plight of the nation's poorest communities is viewed by some as the latest in a series of university-initi ated community service efforts. Neighborhood leaders repre senting financially-strapped, community-based organizations are hesitant to invest too much human capital in building relation ships with nearby campuses when they appear to be such fickle partners.

Colleges and universities seeking to build long-term partnerships with community-based organizations serving low-income neighborhoods must, in light of these historical problems, adopt a collaborative approach that seeks to build the organizing, planning and development capacity of these groups. Neighborhood leaders are also concerned about the nature of the "partnerships" that colleges and universities wish to establish with community-based organizations. In the past, university faculty and administrators have secured funding for community research and service activities in low-income neighborhoods close to their campuses. These grants frequently pro vided campus personnel with salaries, benefits and expens es while producing few, if any, tangible benefits for the residents of these communities. Quoting one East St. Louis community leader, "Show me one thing in this town that was produced through the activities of a un iversity that has helped our community?" These experiences have led many long-time community activists to view university faculty as intellectu al carpet-baggers who use the problems confronting dis tressed communities to justify research contracts that offer little return on investment to the community being studied. These leaders are reluctant, in light of these experiences, to become involved in the latest round of Federally-funded university/community partnerships.

Finally, community leaders experience the effects of university policies and programs on a variety of community activities. In many towns and cities where the university is one of the major employers and landlords, campus policies and programs have a dramatic effect on the lives of residents of nearby low-income communities. When a college builds additional residence halls or off-campus housing on the urban campus, the demand for off-campus housing will decrease, while stabilizing residential and commercial real estate markets. When a university purchases single-family homes to acquire land needed for additional dormitories, a "warm-water faucet" mentality will allow some residents to be displaced, creating bitter feelings towards the campus. When a university constructs a major new research center without providing administrators should emphasize the importance of program implementation and execution. Participating students and fac ulty must focus on devising workable solutions to important community problems and raising the funds needed to carry out such solutions.

10. Recognizing the importance of organizational capacity-building to any university/community partnership, campus administra tors should develop programs that offer classes, training programs and mentoring opportunities to community lead ers as well as students.}

Kenneth M. Reardon, Co-Chair of Planners Network, is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Urban and Regional Planning at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign where he serves as the Co-Director of the East St. Louis Action Research Project. Thomas P. Shields is the Acting Executive Director of the Winstead/IndustriePark Neighborhood Organization in East St. Louis.

While few university/community partnership programs would embody all of the above-mentioned principles of good practice, many such programs have been supporting the empowerment efforts of local community-based organizations in the area for many years. Among these programs are the following:

- Center for Neighborhood Development, Cleveland State University, 108SE 30th, Cleveland, Ohio 44110, 216-641-7130.
- Community and Economic Development Program, Michigan State University, 1801 W. Main Street, Lansing, Michigan 48915-1097, 517- 353-8555. Rex LaFon, State Director.
- Morgan State University, 213 Soldiers Armmy, Baltimore, Maryland 21239, 501-344-3004. Elisa E. Tillman, Senior Research Associate.
- Pratt Institute Center for Community and Environmental Development, 20 Willoughby Avenue, Brooklyn, New York 11201, 718- 656-3464. Ron Shiffmann, Director.
- Haas Center for Public Service, Stanford University, 515 Saffariva Walkway, Stanford, California 94305, 415-723-4377. Tim Stotan, Director.
- Bob P. Dickinson Institute, The University of Arizona, 819 E. First Street, Tucson, Arizona 85730, 621-623-1293. Candy Poston, Professor.
- East St. Louis Action Research Project, University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, 312 Temple Bell Hall, Champaign, Illinois 61820, 217-244- 3588. Ken Reardon, Co-Director.
- College of Community and Public Service, University of Massachusetts at Boston, 100 Mortimer Boulevard, Boston, Massachusetts 02123-3393, 617-287-7287. Marie Sereni, Professor.
- Department of Urban and Regional Planning, University of Michigan, 2000 binomial Boulevard, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48109, 313-763-3960. Barry Glassner, Director.
An Isolated US Opposes Housing as a Human Right

By Tom Angotti and Peter Marcuse

The following is a revised version of a statement prepared by Tom Angotti and Peter Marcuse on behalf of Planners Network for the U.N. Preparatory Committee meeting for Habitat II held in New York in February, which was faxed to me.

What is Habitat II and why is it important?

The Second United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) will be held in Istanbul, June 3-14, 1996. United Nations conferences like Habitat II provide an opportunity for open discussion and debate of the most critical issues facing cities throughout the world. It is tempting to discount the UN events as simply forums for political leaders and government bureaucrats to swap rhetoric with each other. This is indeed much high-bounding prose produced by both official and unofficial participants at such events. But increasingly these global events involve broad participation of NGOs and individuals representing diverse interests and experiences who are working for progressive social change. Thousands of NGOs were engaged in the UN Conference on Environment and Development (The Earth Summit) held in Rio in 1992; the 1995 World Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen; and the 1995 Conference on Women and Development in Beijing. These conferences have created greater public awareness of global problems and opened up new opportunities for grassroots activism and influence public policy.

The first UN conference on human settlements took place twenty years ago in Vancouver. At that conference, there was relatively little participation by NGOs. Partly as a consequence of this lack of participation, many of the principles affirmed at that meeting remain unfulfilled. There are at least four reasons to become involved in Habitat II: 1) networking with similar groups in other countries can be mutually rewarding; 2) the stronger the Habitat Agenda as a more comprehensive measure we have at home to press for a progressive housing policy; 3) to promote a socially responsible role for the U.S. in the global arena; and 4) to stand in solidarity with others struggling for social justice around the world.

What is the U.S. government's position on the Habitat Agenda and why do we oppose it?

The Habitat Agenda is a draft document prepared by a U.N. committee for discussion and eventual adoption in Istanbul. The Agenda focuses on: 1) adequate shelter for all; 2) sustainable human settlements; 3) capacity building and institutional development; 4) international cooperation and coordination; and implementation and follow-up.

The U.S. government has expressed opposition to specific sections of the document that consider housing a human right, and stands virtually alone on this issue. It isn't entirely clear why the U.S. government is opposed to a simple declaration of the right to adequate shelter. The U.S. is signatory to a number of important international documents that include the right to housing, beginning with the Universal Declaration on Human Rights of 1948. The 1949 Housing Act in the U.S. speaks of "a decent home and a suitable living environment for every American family." Henry Cisneros, the progressive Secretary of HUD, is the featured speaker at the National Low-Income Housing Coalition's annual conference, which has the theme "Housing is a Human Right."

However, U.N. staff characterized the U.S. position as "regressive" and "impermissible" - strong language in diplomatic circles. The U.S. is acting on a "compromise" proposal stating that "in the context of other international documents, the U.S. has accepted language that recognizes what many involved in the preparation of the Global Plan of Action for Habitat II refer generically as a 'right to housing.'" Since this is perceived mostly as a dodge, the debate will continue in Istanbul.

The U.S. position is not simply an ideological concession to the Republicans in Congress, who see the U.S. as un-American. It is consistent with the Administration's fear that any suggestion of public responsibility for housing will be interpreted as a potential intrusion on the market. We think the U.S. should unequivocally state its support for the right to housing as a first step towards government action to make adequate shelter a reality for all.

The U.S. National Plan of Action

The draft Plan of Action prepared by the U.S. Habitat committee illustrates what's wrong with the U.S. position. On the positive side, the U.S. Administration recognizes the importance of central cities and the particular urgency of addressing issues of urban poverty in the U.S. The Plan highlights the need to improve education, public safety and health care; urban environmental problems such as water and air quality, lead poisoning and brownfields. And it acknowledges the importance of grassroots efforts in community rebuilding.

The problem with the Plan is that it ultimately ends up placing the main responsibility for rebuilding central city communities on those communities themselves:

"Solutions to the problems confronting metropolitan regions -- as well as the leadership and resources to implement them -- must come primarily from within. ... Grassroots efforts in re-building urban communities must be recognized as the primary catalyst for progress and change and the shared with other communities."

The Plan concludes with praise for the "work ethic," local government and community-based organizations.

"The problem is that the U.S. government has not committed the resources needed to solve urban problems, or to help local government and community-based organizations. On the contrary, since the 1980s, cutbacks in social expenditure have had the greatest impact on central city and low-income populations. Programs aimed at the poorest communities have been severely cut or terminated."

Local governments and community-based organizations in central cities cannot prosper without state and federal government support. Many rely on federal transfers for sizable portions of their budgets. Grassroots initiatives are essential, but they are not sufficient to address the causes of poverty. Also absent from the Plan is mention of the historic role of racism and discrimination in reproducing urban inequalities; the environmentally unsustainable form of urban growth in the U.S. characterized as suburban sprawl, and its contribution to global pollution; the increasing discrimination against immigrants in the U.S. and many other developed nations; and the severe problems of unemployment and economic livelihood in central cities related to these.

In sum, the U.S. National Plan of Action is filled with much rhetoric about self-help and the market, but little promise of action.

For more information on organizing around Habitat II, contact:

(North America)

Roofops Canada
2 Berkeley St., Ste. 207
Toronto, Ontario, Canada M5A 2W3
416/566-1445
E-mail: rooftop@web apocalypse.com

(US)

Center for Economic and Social Rights
105 E. 22nd St., Ste. 909
New York, NY 10010
212/982-1950

(For the U.S. Housing as a Right effort)

National Housing Law Project
2201 Broadway, Suite 815
Oakland, CA 94612
510/251-9400

or

Chester Hartman
Poverty & Race Research Action Council
1711 Connecticut Ave. NW, Ste. 714
Washington, DC 20009
202/387-9887

(The best source of detailed information and analysis of the international housing rights situation)

Centre on Housing Rights and Evictions (COHERE)
Havikstraat 38 bis
Postbus 15100
3501 BC Utrecht
3514 TR Utrecht
The Netherlands
Fax: 31 30 2722 1453
E-mail: leckie@antenne.nl

Profile / page 14

PN Member Profile: Theresa Kilbane

By Margaret Seip

Coming on the ground floor of community management, technical assistance and cooperative housing, Theresa Kilbane has worked in Latin America and the United States in community-based housing and urban development. In Mexico, New York, and now as Director of the Cooperative Housing Fund for Honduras and Guatemala, she fuses an emphasis on community control and participation with the nuts and bolts of non-profit housing finance, development and management.

Cooperative loans provide credit for home improvements to low-income households which would otherwise be unable to obtain formal bank credit.

Honduras, the second largest country in Central America, is one of the poorest in all of the Americas. Bearing the mark of extended United States military and corporate involvement, its economy is characterized by spiraling inflation (now 25%), devalued currency, and slow growth. Though it has a 54% rural majority, the urban growth rate approaches 5% and is occurring in marginal neighborhoods at the urban periphery. In 1992, nearly three-quarters of the population lived below the poverty level. Only one-third were adequately housed with more than 40% living without access to sanitation and 72% without access to water. In the capital city Tegucigalpa, 60% of the population live in "barrios marginales," or informal squatter settlements, formed from land concessions that began 20 years ago. Residents of these neighborhoods earn an average of US$147 per month, most often through informal sector activity. Female-headed households are concentrated there -- over 37% of the population of the Tegucigalpa barrios are single women with children. In general, the barrios lack basic services such as paved roads, solid waste removal, schools, clinics, water and sewer lines.

Theresa grew up in Cleveland, Ohio and graduated in 1978 with a degree in political and international relations from Kent State University. Her first experience in cooperative housing was in New York City, where she came after studying and traveling in Europe. Working with the Urban Homesteading Assistance Board (UHAB), a non-profit provider of training and technical assistance for low-income tenant-owned cooperatives, Theresa worked with self-help housing cooperatives in low-income areas throughout the city. She assisted cooperatives in determining rehabilitation feasibility and in obtaining financing, and developed an emergency loan program. With her husband David Calvert, she also worked to create a tenant cooperative in the city-owned building in the Manhattan Valley where they lived.

Profile / page 14
An Isolated US Opposes Housing As A Human Right

BY TOM ANGOTTI AND PETER MARCUSE

The following is a revised version of a statement prepared by Tom Angotti and Peter Marcuse on behalf of Planners Network for the U.N. Preparatory Committee meeting for Habitat II held in New York in February, which covered the major criticisms of Habitat II.

What is Habitat II and why is it important?

The Second United Nations Conference on Human Settlements (Habitat II) will be held in Istanbul, June 3-14, 1996. United Nations conferences like Habitat II provide an opportunity for open discussion and debate of the most critical issues facing cities throughout the world. It is tempting to discount the UN events as simply forums for political leaders and government bureaucrats to swamp us with rhetoric. There is indeed much high-sounding prose produced by both official and unofficial participants at such events. But increasingly these global events involve broad participation of NGOs and individuals representing diverse interests and experiences, who are working for progressive social change. Thousands of NGOs were engaged in the UN Conference on Environment and Development (The Earth Summit) held in Rio in 1992; the 1995 World Summit on Social Development in Copenhagen; and the 1995 Conference on Women and Development in Beijing. These conferences have created greater public awareness of global problems and opened up new opportunities for grassroots activism to influence public policy.

The first UN conference on human settlements took place twenty years ago in Vancouver. At that conference, there was relatively little participation by NGOs. Partly as a consequence of this lack of participation, many of the principles affirmed at that meeting remain unfulfilled. There are at least four reasons to become involved in Habitat II: 1) networking with similar groups in other countries can be mutually rewarding; 2) the stronger the Habitat Agenda, the more meaningful our position at home to pressure for a progressive housing policy; 3) to promote a socially responsible role for the U.S. in the global arena; and 4) to stand in solidarity with others struggling for social justice around the world.

What is the U.S. government's position on the Habitat Agenda and why do we oppose it?

The Habitat Agenda is a draft document prepared by a UN committee for discussion and eventual adoption in Istanbul. The Agenda focuses on: 1) appropriate shelter for all; 2) sustainable human settlements; 3) capacity building and institutional development; 4) international cooperation and coordination; and implementation and follow-up.

The U.S. government has expressed opposition to specific sections of the document that consider housing a human right, and stands virtually alone on this issue. It isn't entirely clear why the U.S. government is opposed to a simple declaration of the right to adequate shelter. After all, the U.S. is signatory to a number of international documents that include the right to housing, beginning with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights of 1948.

The U.S. Housing Act in the U.S. speaks of "a decent home and a suitable living environment for every American family." Henry Cisneros, the progressive Secretary of HUD, is the featured speaker at the National Low-Income Housing Coalition's annual conference, which has the theme "Housing is a Human Right." However, U.S. staff characterized the U.S. position as "regressive" and "unimpeachable" - strong language in diplomatic circles.

The U.S. committed to a "compromise" proposal stating that "in the context of other international documents, the U.S. has accepted language that recognizes what many involved in the preparation of the Global Plan of Action for Habitat II refers generally as a 'right to housing'". Since this is perceived mostly as a dodge, the debate will continue in Istanbul.

The U.S. position is not simply an ideological concession to the Republicans in Congress, who see the U.S. as un-American. It is consistent with the Administration's fear that any suggestion of public responsibility for housing will be interpreted as a potent incursion on the market. We think the U.S. should unequivocally state its support for the right to housing as a first step towards government action to make adequate shelter a reality for all.

The U.S. National Plan of Action

The draft Plan of Action prepared by the U.S. Habitat committee illustrates what's wrong with the U.S. position. On the positive side, the U.S. recognizes the importance of central cities and the particular urgency of addressing issues of urban poverty in the U.S. The Plan highlights the need to improve education, public safety and health care; urban environmental problems such as water and air quality, lead poisoning and brownfields. And it acknowledges the importance of grassroots efforts in community re-building.

The problem with the Plan is that it ultimately ends up placing the main responsibility for re-building central city communities on those communities themselves:

- Solutions to the problems confronting metropolitan regions -- as well as the leadership and resources to implement them -- must come primarily from within...
- Grassroots efforts in re-building urban communities must be recognized as the primary catalyst for progress and change and the shared with other communities.

The Plan concludes with praise for the "work ethic," local government and community-based organizations. The problem is that the U.S. government has not committed the resources needed to solve urban problems, or to help local government and community-based organizations. On the contrary, since the 1980s, cutsbacks in social expenditures have had the greatest impact on central city and low-income populations. Programs aimed at the poorest communities have been severely cut or terminated.

Local governments and community-based organizations in central cities cannot prosper without state and federal government support. Many rely on federal transfers for sizable portions of their budgets. Grassroots initiatives are essential, but they are not sufficient to address larger causes of poverty.

Also absent from the Plan is mention of the historic role of racism and discrimination in reproducing urban inequalities; the environmentally unsustainable form of urban growth in the U.S. characterized as suburban sprawl, and its contribution to global pollution; the increasing discrimination against immigrants in the U.S. and many other developed nations; and the severe problems of unemployment and economic livelihood in central cities related to "the" U.S. national policy of free-trade.

In sum, the U.S. National Plan of Action is filled with much rhetoric about self-help and the market, but little promise of action.

For more information on organizing around Habitat II, contact:

- (North America)
  Rooftops Canada
  2 Berkeley St., Ste. 207
  Toronto, Ontario, Canada M5A 2W3
  416/356-1445
  e-mail: rooftops@web.aero

- (US)
  Center for Economic and Social Rights
  105 E. 22nd St., Ste. 909
  New York, NY 10010
  212/982-1950

- (For the U.S. Housing as a Right effort)
  National Housing Law Project
  2201 Broadway, Suite 815
  Oakland, CA 94612
  510/251-9400

- or
  Chester Hartman
  Poverty & Race Research Action Council
  1711 Connecticut Ave. NW, Ste. 714
  Washington, DC 20009
  202/387-9887

- (The best source of detailed information and analysis of the International housing rights situation)
  Centre on Housing Rights and Evictions (COHRE)
  Havikstraat 38 bis
  Postbus 15100
  3501 BC Utrecht
  3514 TR Utrecht
  The Netherlands
  Fax: 30 27 2722 1453
  e-mail: leckie@anteenle

Profile: Theresa Khilane

Coming in on the ground floor of community management, technical assistance and cooperative housing, Theresa Khilane has worked in Latin America and the United States in community-based housing and urban development. In Mexico, New York, and now in the Director of the Cooperative Housing Fund for Honduras and Guatemala, she focuses an emphasis on community control and participation with the nuts and bolts of non-profit housing finance, development and management. CHF Honduras/Guatemala provides financing, technical assistance and training to local organizations for low-income housing development and infrastructure improvements. Its innovative loan programs provide credit for home improvements to low-income households which would otherwise be unable to obtain formal bank credit.

Honduras, the second largest country in Central America, is one of the poorest in all of the Americas. Bearing the mark of extended United States military and corporate involvement, its economy is characterized by spiraling inflation (now 25%), devalued currency, and slow growth. Though it has a 5% rural majority, the urban growth rate approaches 5% and is occurring in marginal neighborhoods at the urban periphery. In 1992, nearly three-quarters of the population lived below the poverty level. Only one-third were adequately housed with more than 40% living without access to sanitation and 72% without access to water.

In the capital city Tegucigalpa, 60% of the population live in "barrios marginales," or informal squatter settlements, formed from land occupations that began 20 years ago. Residents of these neighborhoods earn an average of US$147 per month, most often through informal sector activity. Female-headed households are concentrated there -- over 37% of the population of the Tegucigalpa barrios are single women with children. In general, the barrios lack basic services such as paved roads, solid waste removal, schools, clinics, water and sewage lines. Theresa grew up in Cleveland, Ohio and graduated in 1978 with a degree in political and international relations from Kent State University. Her first experience in cooperative housing was in New York City, where she came after studying and traveling in Europe. Working with the Urban Homestaying Assistance Board (UHAB), a non-profit provider of training and technical assistance for low-income tenant-owned cooperatives, Theresa worked with self-help housing cooperatives in low-income areas throughout the city. She assisted cooperatives in determining rehabilitation feasibility and in obtaining financing, and developed an emergency loan program. With her husband David Calvert, she also worked to create a tenant cooperative in the city-owned building in Manhattan Valley where they lived.

Profile / page 14
At UHAI she learned first hand the impact of community control and the potential for non-profit housing programs. Working and living in Latin American communities in New York City sparked her interest in Latin America. Desiring a deeper understanding of Latino culture and history with which to inform her work, she moved to Mexico City in 1983 to work with the Centro Coordinador de Proyectos Económicos, a community-based organization working in marginalized neighborhoods on the city’s periphery. Witnessing the scope and breadth of popular organizations and learning about the struggles for self-determination of Central Americans inspired and augmented her sense of possibility.

Returning to New York in 1985 with their newborn daughter Ana, Theresa continued to work on cooperative housing and community planning initiatives. She served on the board of directors of the Valley Restoration Local Development Corporation and was a parent representative for a family day care network in East Harlem. She also began her studies in urban planning at Columbia University. As a member of the studio in Haiti following Darrow’s departure she experienced the power and capability of people working in barrios and popular organizations. As in Mexico, she witnessed in Haiti what can be accomplished with hope and a belief in change -- despite the daily events that run counter to it. Her twin daughters, Marion and Elizabeth, were born in 1987. Completing her masters in urban planning at Columbia in 1989, Theresa returned to UHAI as the Director for Program Development and then as Assistant Director. In 1992, Theresa and her family moved to Honolulu where she consulted for CARITAS and Save the Children, then took over the CHF Honduran/Guatemalan programs. CHF has worked with 14 groups locally to provide financing, technical assistance and training for low-income housing development, housing improvement and community infrastructure improvements -- about 6,000 total families served in just over ten years. Their over $1 million US loan portfolio finances small-scale credit programs directed at poor residents of peri-urban areas in the capital of Tegucigalpa, Honduras’ secondary city San Pedro de Sula, and the Bay Islands. CHF’s experience shows that given the opportunity, low-income households can make use of credit to improve their environment and standard of living and pay back the loans so that other households can continue to benefit.

Theresa oversees the administration and operation of CHF’s several revolving loan funds utilizing their refinances for housing and sanitation improvement loan programs. In her tenure, she has funded and implemented an innovative low-cost housing improvement program with local non-profit organizations. Among her greatest challenges has been the design of projects that serve poor people and are financially sustainable, especially in economies with spiraling inflation. Understanding the right mix necessary for supporting local institutions without building dependency has been another critical focus.

Theresa’s husband, David Calvert, is the Country Director of Casa Alianza de Honduras (Covenent House' Honduran agency) which runs outreach and shelter programs for street kids. She has written on a variety of subjects including American Class Society in Statistics (Kent Free Press, 1978), A Guide to Cooperative Management (UHAI, 1982), and "An Urban Environmental Sanitation Loan Program in Honduras" in Down to Earth - Community Perspectives on Health, Development and the Environment edited by Bonnie Haff and Margaret Gwynne (Kumarian Press, 1995).

SHELTERFORCE

The Journal of Affordable Housing Strategies

News • Analysis • Solutions

For 20 years, Shelterforce has been the voice of the affordable housing movement, providing news, analysis and solutions to the crisis in low- and moderate-income housing in America. Only Shelterforce provides complete coverage of the issue at the core of community development and urban revitalization.

$18.00 per year for individuals
$5.00 for a sample issue
$30.00 per year for organizations and libraries

Visit SHELTERFORCE ONLINE at: http://www.nhi.org

Mixed inaugural issues of SHELTERFORCE, 439 Main Street, Dept. PN, Orange, NJ 07050

PLEASE WRITE!

The surest sign of an effective network is as much participation as possible. As we strive to fill Planners Network each month with information and resources, we can only do so much without your help.

Send us your:
Resource listings • Job Postings

Article ideas (or articles, even) • Suggestions, comments, critiques of the newsletter.

The Planners Network
The Planners Network is an association of professionals, activists, academics, and students involved in physical, social, economic, and environmental planning in urban and rural areas, who promote fundamental change in our political and economic systems.

We believe that planning should be a tool for allocating resources and developing the environment to eliminate the great inequalities of wealth and power in our society, rather than to maintain and justify the status quo. We believe that planning should be used to assure adequate food, clothing, shelter, medical care, jobs, safe schools, and a healthful environment. We advocate public participation for meeting these needs, because the private market has proven incapable of doing so.

The Planners Network Newsletter is published six times a year as the principal means of communication among Network members. Annual financial contributions are voluntary, but we need funds for operating expenses. The Steering Committee has recommended the following amounts as minimums for Network members: $15 for those with incomes under $25,000, students and unemployed, $25 for those between $25,000 and $50,000, and $45 for those over $50,000. Organizations may subscribe for $30.

Enclosed is my check payable to Planners Network for $_____
Profile / continued from page 13

At UHAB she learned first hand the impact of community control and the potential for non-profit housing programs. Working and living in Latino communities in New York City sparked her interest in Latin America. Desiring a deeper understanding of Latino culture and history with which to inform her work, she moved to Mexico City in 1983 to work with the Centro Coordinador de Proyectos Economicos, a community-based organization working in marginalized neighborhoods on the city’s periphery. Witnessing the scope and breadth of popular organizations and learning about the struggles for self-determination of Central Americans inspired and augmented her sense of possibility.

Returning to New York in 1985 with their newborn daughter Ana, Theresa continued to work on cooperative housing and community planning initiatives. She served on the board of directors of the Valley Restoration Local Development Corporation and was a parent representative for a family day care network in East Harlem. She also began her studies in urban planning at Columbia University. As a member of the studio in Haiti following Davalier’s departure she experienced the power and capability of people working in barrios and popular organizations. As in Mexico, she witnessed in Haiti what can be accomplished with hope and a belief in change -- despite the daily events that run counter to it. Her twin daughters, Marie and Elizabeth, were born in 1987. Completing her masters in urban planning at Columbia in 1989, Theresa returned to UHAB as the Director for Program Development and then an Assistant Director.

In 1992, Theresa and her family moved to Honduras where she consulted for CARITAS and Save the Children, then took over the Chef Hondureno/Guatemalana programs. Chef has worked with 14 groups locally to provide financing, technical assistance and training for low-income housing development, housing improvements and community infrastructure improvements -- with over 6,000 total families served in just over ten years. Their over $1 million US loan portfolio financed small-scale credit programs directed at poor residents of peri-urban areas in the capital of Tegucigalpa, Honduras’ secondary city San Pedro de Sula, and the Bay Islands. Chef’s experience shows that given the opportunity, low-income households can make productive use of credit to improve their environment and standard of living and pay back the loans so that other households can continue to benefit.

Theresa oversees the administration and operation of Chef’s several revolving loan funds utilizing their resources for housing and sanitation improvement loan programs. In her tenure, she has funded and implemented an innovative low-cost housing improvement program with local non-profit organizations. Among her greatest challenges has been the design of projects that serve poor people and are financially sustainable, especially in economies with spiraling inflation. Understanding the right mix necessary for supporting local institutions without building dependency has been another critical focus.

Theresa’s husband, David Calvert, is the Country Director of Casa Alianza de Honduras (Covenant House’ Honduran agency) which runs outreach and shelter programs for “street kids.” She has written on a variety of subjects including American Class Society in Statistics (Kent Free Press, 1978), A Guide to Cooperative Management (UHAB, 1982), and “An Urban Environmental Sanitation Loan Program in Honduras” in Down to Earth - Community Perspectives on Health, Development and the Environment edited by Bonnie Mati, and Jeffrey Ayres and Margaret Gwynne (Kumarian Press, 1995).

Theresa and her family are planning to return to live in New York City this July. To reach Theresa by mail: T. Kelkine, c/o CHEF Honduras, I-MTG #550, P.O. Box 02-5320, Miami, FL 33102-5320. FAX/PHONE 011-504-36-8963. email: teresa%chef@vhlnh.org @nett.org

PHN Member Profiles is a new regular feature in Planners Network. If you know of a PHN member who should be profiled in the newsletter, or would like to write a profile of someone, please contact the editor.

SHELTERFORCE
The Journal of Affordable Housing Strategies News - Analysis - Solutions

For 20 years, Shelterforce has been the voice of the affordable housing movement, providing news, analysis and solutions to the crisis in low- and moderate-income housing in America. Only Shelterforce provides complete coverage of the issues at the core of community development and urban revitalization.

- $18.00 per year for individuals
- $15.00 for a sample issue
- $30.00 per year for organizations and libraries

Enclosed is my check payable to Shelterforce for $__

| Name: |
| Address: |

City State Zip

SHELTERFORCE, 439 Main Street, Dept. PHN, Orange, NJ 07050

Visit SHELTERFORCE ONLINE at: http://www.nhi.org

The Planners Network
The Planners Network is an association of professionals, activists, academics, and students involved in physical, social, economic, and environmental planning in urban and rural areas, who promote fundamental change in our political and economic systems.

We believe that planning should be a tool for allocating resources and developing the environment to eliminate the great inequalities of wealth and power in our society, rather than to maintain and justify the status quo. We believe that planning should be used to assure adequate food, clothing, shelter, medical care, jobs, safe housing, and a healthy environment. We advocate public responsibility for meeting these needs, because the private market has proven incapable of doing so.

The Planners Network Newsletter is published six times a year as the principal means of communication among Network members. Annual financial contributions are voluntary, but we need funds for operating expenses. The Steering Committee has recommended the following amounts as minimums for Network members: $15 for those with incomes under $25,000, students and unemployed, $25 for those between $25,000 and $50,000; and $45 for those over $50,000. Organizations may subscribe for $30.

PLANNERS NETWORK
March 1996

PLEASE WRITE!
The surest sign of an effective network is as much participation as possible. As we strive to fill Planners Network each month with information and resources, we can only do so much without your help.

Send us your:
Resource listings • Job Postings

Article ideas (or articles, even) • Suggestions, comments, critiques of the newsletter.

Planners Network
Steering Committee
Ann Forsyth, Co-Chair
Amherst, MA, 01005-6434
email: forsyth@fsamp.uman.edu

Ken Reardon, Co-Chair
Urban, IL, 61574-5380
e-mail: kreardon@uiuc.edu

Thomas Angotti, Co-Chair, Executive Editor
Brooklyn, NY, 11203-3486
e-mail: theo@suny.edu

Emily Ackenburg
Boston, MA, 02135-3982
e-mail: ek@ford.com

Laila Apostol-Paires
Boston, MA, 02127-7286
e-mail: apostol_paires@suny.orb.mit.edu

Teresa Cifone
Albany, NY, 0507-7753
e-mail: tcfone@vetnet.snyc.edu

Dana R. Driskell
Boston, MA, 02120-8505

Chesley Hartman
Wash., DC, 20238-9887
phoebe@pcc.edu

Peter Marcuse
New York, NY, 10016-3322
e-mail: pm@phoebe.org

Barbara Rascher
Toronto, Ontario, Canada, 414-753-7552
e-mail: ar5503@ontari.yorku.ca

New York, NY 10237-7934

Andrée Tremoulet
Paris, France, 032-999-3608

Robert Yehle
Los Angeles, CA, 213-237-0134
e-mail: jy36@comell.edu

Jordie Yin
Brooklyn, NY, 02127-7617
e-mail: jy36@comell.edu

Newsletter Editor: Winton Pittoff
Brooklyn, NY, 11203-3486
email: winton@sw.ternet.com
Moving?

Please make sure to let PN know if you’re moving. It saves us money and helps ensure that you don’t miss an issue!

Don’t forget to register for the 1996 Planners Network conference! Information and registration materials are on pages 8-9.

Next Issue

ARRIVAL DEADLINE FOR PLANNERS NETWORK #117 COPY:
WEDNESDAY, MAY 1, 1996.

All materials should be sent to:

Planners Network/Pratt GCPE
200 Willoughby Ave.
Brooklyn, NY 11205
718/636-3461; fax: 718/636-3709

As always, our thanks to those who can type their notes. It reduces our chances of misreading what you write. Feature articles of 500-1,500 words are always welcome; a diskette is greatly appreciated.